TRADERS' GLOSSARY

At-the-Money (ATM) — An option whose strike price is nearest the current price of the underlying deliverable.

Average Directional Movement Index (ADX) — Indicator developed by J. Welles Wilder to measure market trend intensity.

Back-Testing — A strategy is tested or optimized on historical data and then the strategy is applied to new data to see if the results are consistent.

Breakaway Gap — When a tradable exits a trading range by trading at price levels that leave a price area where no trading occurs on a bar chart. Typically, these gaps appear at the completion of important chart formations.

Breakout — The point when the market price moves out of the trend channel.

Calendar Spreads — Also known as a time spread or horizontal spread, calendar spreads exploit differences in time value between options.

Call Option — A contract that gives the buyer of the option the right but not the obligation to take delivery of the underlying security at a specific price within a certain time.

Commitment of Traders — A report published by the CFTC that quantifies the sentiment level among various traders: commercials, noncommercials, and small traders.

Fade — Selling a rising price or buying a falling price. A trader fading an up opening would be short, for example.

Floor Traders — Employees of brokerage firms working on exchange trading floors.

Gann Theory — Various analytical techniques based on price, time, and pattern to project changes in the direction of the markets. Developed by legendary trader W.D. Gann.

Greeks — Jargon; a loose term encapsulating a set of risk variables used by options traders.

In-the-Money (ITM) — A call option whose strike price is lower than the stock or future's price, or a put option whose strike price is higher than the underlying stock or future's price.

Kagi — One of three types of Japanese candlestick charts that do not have time on the horizontal axis.

Momentum — A time series representing change of today's price from some fixed number of days back in history.

Moving Average — A mathematical procedure to smooth or eliminate the fluctuations in data and to assist in determining when to buy and sell. Moving averages emphasize the direction of a trend, confirm trend reversals, and smooth out price and volume fluctuations or "noise" that can confuse interpretation of the market; the sum of a value plus a selected number of previous values divided by the total number of values.

Moving Average Crossovers — The point where the various moving average lines intersect each other or the price line on a moving average price bar chart. Technicians use crossovers to signal price-based buy and sell opportunities.

Moving Average Convergence/Divergence (MACD) — The crossing of two exponentially smoothed moving averages that are plotted above and below a zero line. The crossover, movement through the zero line, and divergences generate buy and sell signals.

Near-the-Money — An option with a strike price close to the current price of the underlying tradable.

Out-of-the-Money (OTM) — A call option whose exercise (strike) price is above the current market price of the underlying security or futures contract.

Put Option — A contract to sell a specified amount of a stock or commodity at an agreed time at the stated exercise price.
