TRADERS' GLOSSARY

A Priori — Known ahead of time.

At-the-Money (ATM) — An option whose strike price is nearest the current price of the underlying deliverable.

Average Directional Movement Index (ADX) — Indicator developed by J. Welles Wilder to measure market trend intensity.

Average True Range — A moving average of the true range.

Backtesting — A strategy is tested or optimized on historical data and then the strategy is applied to new data to see if the results are consistent.

Bid and Ask — Highest price and lowest price that an investor will pay for a tradable.

Exchange-Traded Funds (ETFs) — Collections of stocks that are bought and sold as a package on an exchange, principally the American Stock Exchange (AMEX), but also the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE) and the Chicago Board Options Exchange (CBOE).

Fade — Selling a rising price or buying a falling price. A trader fading an up opening would be short, for example.

Greeks — Jargon; a loose term encapsulating a set of risk variables used by options traders.

In-the-Money (ITM) — A call option whose strike price is lower than the stock or future's price, or a put option whose strike price is higher than the underlying stock or future's price. For example, when a commodity price is $500, a call option with a strike price of $400 is considered in-the-money.

Long — Establishing ownership of the responsibilities of a buyer of a tradable; holding securities in anticipation of a price increase in that security.

Near-the-Money — An option with a strike price close to the current price of the underlying tradable.

Out-of-the-Money (OTM) — A call option whose exercise (strike) price is above the current market price of the underlying security or futures contract. For example, if a commodity price is $500, then a call option purchased for a strike price of $550 is considered out-of-the-money.

Pairs Trading — Taking a long position and a short position on two stocks in the same sector, creating a hedge.

Relative Strength Index (RSI) — An indicator invented by J. Welles Wilder and used to ascertain overbought/oversold and divergent situations.

S&P E-Mini — Electronically traded, smaller-sized ($50 times the S&P 500) contracts of the Standard & Poor's 500 index.

Stochastics Oscillator — An overbought/oversold indicator that compares today's price to a preset window of high and low prices. These data are then transformed into a range between zero and 100 and then smoothed.

Whipsaw — Losing money on both sides of a price swing.
